

Precious Metal Stock Review

Welcome to my inaugural newsletter. Seeing as I am still working at finishing my new website as well as keeping up with everything in the business I will try and keep this short. I am offering you a free month of watch my portfolio as an early subscriber to my newsletter. I must complete my disclaimer for legal reasons and I hope to have it done some time next week. I will be sending my portfolio weightings out to you twice a month; at the beginning and the end. It will be through an email and if you have any questions or concerns please do email me at newsletter@preciousmetalstockreview.com. I hope to open your eyes you to some great stocks and help you through the woods in this terribly confusing Junior and Exploration market.

My format will be simple technical analysis and big picture fundamentals as that fits my trading style. To make really big money you have to spot the trend then use technical analysis to find entry points and you must have boatloads of patience. I promise you, patience will be rewarded. One strategy I employ is to set aside a dollar amount every month and invest it in Junior and Exploration stocks. Whether things are up or down averaging in is a great way to play a big long-term trend. Here you will not get rich over night but accumulate wealth over time and at times with spectacular and quick gains.

The fundamentals for precious metals keep getting better by the day. There is bad news every single day regarding the financial stocks, inflation, and geopolitical turmoil. While watching Ben Bernanke testify this week it just makes me gag how congress has no clue on what questions to really ask and the fact that they show so much respect for this man who is ruining the US currency. I urge you to watch Mr. Ron Paul's exchange with him <http://video.google.ca/videoplay?docid=1379204622105355215&q=Ron+Paul&total=34120&start=40&num=10&so=1&type=search&plindex=0>. After the testimony finished he was interviewed via phone on FOX business channel. They talk about stagflation. Stagflation is simply, and increase in money supply (inflation) coupled with slowing economic growth. This is worse than either inflation or deflation alone. Here are his comments on FOX

<http://video.google.ca/videoplay?docid=8100929168684723391&q=Ron+Paul&total=34123&start=30&num=10&so=1&type=search&plindex=7>. Believe it or not I am not urging you to support or vote for Dr. Ron Paul but I do ask you consider his theories and beliefs as I believe they are the only way America will survive this crisis with its current "Empire" status.

This past week a reliable source informed me that since Europe's Junior and Exploration market is small, many of Europe's big banks and investment firms are opening branches in Canada in order to gain easier access to the large market there on both the Toronto and Vancouver exchanges. It will only take a small amount of money to move Junior and Exploration stocks a large percentage. So far in my career I have had the privilege to be privy to 100% gains in a week or less on news, these types of events will become more frequent as time passes and as I have stated this is the best opportunity to buy Junior and Exploration stocks since this bull began.

Technical Charts:

WOW! How's that for a six month chart. $300 in six months, unreal and it has much further to go over time. Looks strong to me and could pull back to $900 tomorrow to the 50 day moving average and still not violate its uptrend. Try and find a chart that looks like that other than here! Honestly nothing goes up any faster, other than at the blow off peak which is still years away. I get giddy thinking about it!

WOW! How's that for a six month chart. Silver can fall to $16.50 or so and not be hurt. There really isn't much to say as this picture paints a thousand words.

WOW! How's that for a six month chart. Sorry I don't know what else to say! Platinum has taken off like a rocket since mid January launching over $500 dollars an ounce. As I peer into my crystal ball, well my monitor, I see that Gold will one day have a chart that looks eerily similar to this one. The relationship between gold and platinum has correlated historically until the past few years when Platinum took off. Will Gold the tortoise catch Platinum the hare one day? Time will tell but I prefer slow and steady myself.

Looks like it has some catching up to do! Palladium has been on fire especially since the power crisis in South Africa became official and is squeezing supply now and for the at least the next couple years. There are some great companies that are very much undervalued and look like the inverse to their products. Please check my charts section on my website which will be updated weekly for some more technical analysis. Have a great week.

Best Regards,

Warren Bevan